The Jerusalem Conference on Information Technology

Dear Colleagues,

Come to Jerusalem in August because you know that the health of our planet depends in some way upon a balance of information processing power and you want to share your experience; or, because you have something you need to buy or something useful to sell and it makes good business sense; or, because you realize that most of the problems faced in advanced technology of countries are very similar to those faced in developing countries and they are too complex to discuss in any way other than face-to-face.

Dr. Fagbemi's statement, the topics and speakers in the formal programme, and the proposed set of group discussion topics all sum up to a prediction that the Jerusalem Conference on Information Technology may have significant future impact. It might be a rare event.

I hope you can get there and participate.

G. Estrin
